The only thing better than catching criminals is being one step ahead of them

On the street, police use tangible evidence to solve crimes. But criminals can leave behind much more, including data, patterns and profiles. With our help, you'll learn how to analyze that data, recognize patterns and develop profiles, becoming an invaluable asset in law enforcement's efforts to not only bring criminals to justice, but also prevent future crimes from being committed.

Over the program's eight classes, you'll learn the most advanced methods of collecting crime data, analyzing it and using it to create statistical models and research for law enforcement to better understand and anticipate crime. You'll also learn to understand the motives and patterns of the criminals themselves. You don't need any previous law enforcement experience, and at the end of the program, not only will you receive a certificate from us, but also one from the California Department of Justice designating you as a nationally certified Crime and Intelligence Analyst as well as a certificate of recognition from the Law Enforcement Intelligence Units.
