

Example 4: Self-assessment

The following example shows how self-assessment can be used to collect evidence of students' progress in dance. Self-assessment:

- provides an enriching teaching strategy that engages students in their learning
- gives teachers information that enables them to plan further teaching and learning activities
- provides an insight into individual learning achievements.

Name: _____ Date: _____
During my dance lessons I have been: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• developing movement skills• learning about the elements of dance• exploring and creating movement to express ideas• looking at, and discussing dances made by other people in my class and by choreographers.
Skills I have developed in dance:	Skills I would like to improve further:
What elements of dance did I learn about and use?	What were some of the ideas that were used in the dance?
What did I learn about dances made by other people?	Things I liked about this dance unit or lesson: