

"SERVICING THE NEEDS OF FAMILIES"

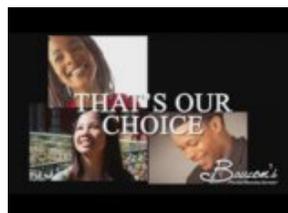

Baucom, a St. Louis native and Licensed Funeral Director, has served the community in excess of 30 years in the direction and consultation of funeral services at several of the most prestigious establishments in the St. Louis metropolitan area. Baucom worked and served as General Manager of one of the largest funeral establishments in the St. Louis area for over 20 years.

The vision of Kelvin O. Baucom, his wife Regina, and staff, has formulated an alternative way of serving our community in those special moments of life.

What is Cremation?

By Elders Options of Texas

In the US, those who chose cremation may ask that their ashes be spread in some location that is sacred to them, or may have their ashes buried. In some family traditions, the cremated remains of the deceased may be kept by surviving family members.

Cremation is a process in which intense heat is used to transform the body back to its basic elements. The body, enclosed in a container approved for cremation, is placed in a cremation chamber. The soft tissue is vaporized. What remains is not ashes, but bone fragments weighing from three to nine pounds on average. This is what is contained in the cremation urn.

Funeral homes often engage the services of a local crematory. Crematories provide the actual cremation with reverence and dignity. Crematories are regulated and inspected by state and federal agencies.

Cremation is just one form of preparing the body for final disposition. Cremation procedures include filling out the death certificate and all other official documents.

Cremation does not take the place of customary funeral services; it's merely another form of final disposition. Funeral services are the way we, the living, share our grief, acknowledge the contributions the deceased has made to our lives, and prepare ourselves for going on with life.
