

A career making a difference.

The Job: Policy analyst

You'll be involved in developing policies that aim to keep B.C. workplaces safe and guide our team in providing important services to employers, workers, and others. You'll research, develop, and present discussion papers, briefing notes, and policy and regulation proposals.

The difference:

Shaping policy that saves lives

Is this job a good fit for you?

We're looking for people who can:

- Develop public policy
- Assist with public consultation and participate on working committees
- Manage their work and time and lead and support others
- Build effective working relationships
- Analyze information, identify and evaluate alternatives, and make recommendations and decisions

Your background and experience:

- A degree in public or business administration, accounting, law, political science, occupational hygiene, or related field
- At least two years relevant experience in the development of public policy and regulation in the areas of compensation, assessments, occupational disease, strategic initiatives, or rehabilitation
- Comprehensive knowledge of the Workers Compensation Act and workers' compensation policy and practice
- Excellent oral and written communication skills
- A working knowledge of statistics and statistical analysis is preferred
- Experience with stakeholder relations is considered an asset