Audit spotlight report

The headline of the previous report was that growth in audit fees had increased significantly, spiking at a 7% growth rate, after slowing in previous years. This report identifies that fee increases have dropped again in the past two years, now at just 2.6% growth year-on-year. This 2.6% comes from just 33% of charities that have experienced an increase in fees, however with 43% of charities sticking with the same auditor, could charities get better deals shopping about? With 797 audit firms advising the UK's largest charities, competition is as strong as ever in the charity audit market. Crowe UK is the strongest firm within the charity space at present, and is ahead by far in audit fee income—the barometer used to create a hierarchy of firms.

While 43% of charities have chosen to remain with their previous auditor, charities should be constantly reviewing their advisors to ensure they are getting the best quality service for the most competitive price. We hope that this report can be used as an aid in that process, utilising data such as that shown in figure 3, listing audit fees paid in relation to income band, to benchmark against charities of similar size and scale.

Other findings in this report include:

- Audit fees cost the UK's largest charities £72.3m between 2017/18, increasing by 10.2m in five years
- 43% of charities have not changed auditor over the last decade.
- There were 344 auditor changes in the latest financial year when compared to the previous year
- Crowe UK LLP once again top the fee tables earning £6.4m in fees; giving the firm an 8.9% market share
- The firms with the most clients are haysmacintyre with 303 clients, followed by Crowe Clark Whitehill with 271 and RSM with 213
- The largest charity to change auditor was Nuffield Health which paid a fee of £300k to Deloitte which it previously paid to Grant Thornton
- Haysmacintyre made the most client gains with 25 new clients but Crowe UK LLP gained the most in fee income worth £534k

Methodology

Charity Financials records the names of all the advisers employed to provide services to the top 5,000 charities. These include auditors, investment managers, banks and legal advisers, as well as any others mentioned within charities' annual financial statements. For audits, it is the firm that conducted the audit and signed off the audit report that is recorded in the Charity Financials database.

By recording the names of the advisers listed by each charity every year, we have identified when changes take place, the length of time relationships exist for and how often charities make such changes.

Background to the top 5,000 charities

To be included in the Charity Financials top 5,000 charities an organisation must have either an annual income that is greater than £1.734m, annual expenditure greater than £1.772m or total funds/net assets greater than £4.032m. Only one of these three criteria need to be met. Some organisations are excluded despite having charitable status, namely academies, independent schools, universities and housing associations.

Those included in the top 5,000 are a varied group, both in terms of size and activity. Some focus on local services while others are involved in complex international projects. Some exist simply to provide funding to other organisations. One thing they all have in common is that they are required to be externally audited. The complexity of their operations will dictate the level of involvement required by the auditor, which in turn will be reflected in the fee charged—something that should be taken into consideration when viewing the tables included in this report.

Audit fees

Audit fees are increasing but only for a third of charities

Figure 1 shows that audit fees have increased by more than £10m over the last five years, growing from £62.1m to £72.3m. The table shows the polarisation of fee income in relation to income band. Just 107 organisations have a total income greater than £80m and the audit fees paid by this group were £10.3m which represents 14% of all fee expenditure. Conversely, 1,091 organisations had less than £1m of income, collectively paying £5.5m for audits and representing 7.6% of the total fees. Examining the average fee paid for each band, the lowest band is paying £5k whereas the largest band pays on average £96k.

Figure 2 shows how many charities have increased or decreased their audit fees, as well as the total audit fees per income bands. It shows that only 33% of the top 5,000 charities experienced an increase in audit fees, 44% saw no change and 19% saw a decrease, with the remainder either not disclosing a fee or having only one years' fees recorded, thus preventing a comparison to be made. This means that this year, 63% either stayed the same or decreased their audit fee expenditure which can only be welcome news to those charities. The greatest increase was experienced by those with income between £3m and £10m which saw a £800k annual increase. The lower bands have a greater percentage of organisations witnessing no change in audit fees whereas the largest bands have a greater percentage of fee increases.

Figure 3 shows the range of audit fee values across each income band. It reveals that there were 33 charities with income greater than £80m and audit fees of more than £100,000, up from 32 reported last year. Conversely there were 674 charities with income less than £1m and audit fees between £1k and £5k a change from the 722 we reported in 2015/16. Over half of the top 5,000 (2601) have fees less than £10k, 1,880 have fees between £10k and £30k and the remaining 420 have fees more than £30k.

The most expensive audit for a charity with income under £1m was the Prudential Staff Charitable Trust which had an income of £872k and an audit fee of £36k to KPMG. Meanwhile the largest fee for a charity with an income between £1m and £3m was the £79k paid by Womancare Global to BDO. The most expensive audit overall was paid by Save the Children International with a fee of £580k to KPMG. This is followed by Wellcome Trust, which paid £400k to Deloitte. Figure 4 details the charities with the largest audit fees.

Top auditors by fees received

Crowe UK LLP remains in top position

Crowe UK LLP is the top charity auditor earning £6.4m in fee income from 271 clients, as figure 5 illustrates. The firms' charity business earned £1.5m more than BDO LLP in second position, earning £4.8m in fees. In third position is haysmacintyre with £4.5m in fees.

Charities should use this table to compare the fees charged by firms to charities of a similar size. The table is an over-simplification based on average fee but can be used to shortlist firms which charities may want to invite to tender. For instance, the average fee charged by Crowe UK LLP to charities with income less than £1m was £6k compared to £9k charged by PwC.

Figure 6 shows the historic audit fee totals for each firm each year and reveals that there has been some change in positioning of firms in recent years. Although Crowe UK LLP have retained the top spot for several years the order of subsequent companies has changed. BDO has retained second position from 2015/16 after being third in 2014/15. Haysmacintyre have moved into third after previously being seventh and PwC has moved to 5th position after previously holding the second position.

The top 10 firms collectively earned £39.3m in fees, up from £39.1m last year, which represents 55% of all top 5,000 charity audit fees.

Of course, those firms at the top of these rankings are not necessarily the most expensive – their revenue may result from the size and number of clients that they audit. This table nevertheless gives us an idea of the main players in the audit world and who is increasing their market share.

The total list of 797 auditors is available to charities upon request (email mpincher@wilmington.co.uk). Subscribers to Charity Financials already have access to this.

Figures 7 and 8 show firms which have increased their number of clients and the value in audit fees the increase represents. For this data we have only included charities with a previous named auditor so that a comparison can be made. This data therefore does not include new organisations with only one financial year reported.

Crowe UK LLP made the greatest addition to their fee income with the addition of 21 new clients and a collective audit fee of £534k. They are followed by BDO LLP which gained 12 new clients worth £463k. Haysmacintyre saw the largest increase in clients, with 25 newly attained at a worth of £411k; Deloitte's addition of three clients was worth £404k in fees.

Meanwhile Figure 9 shows the largest 20 charities (by total income) to change auditor, showing the current and previous auditor and the fees paid.

Longevity of audit relationships

43% of charities have not changed auditor in past decade

Charity Financials holds data on all the auditor changes made by the top 5,000 charities over the past fifteen years. Figure 10 shows how many charities have had either just one single auditor or multiple auditors over this period. Surprisingly, 43% of charities have stayed with the same auditor for the whole period. Among those that have changed, 35% have changed once and 18% have changed twice, while 5% of charities have changed three or four times. Only two organisations changed five times.

The Charity Financials database has recorded a total of 356 auditor changes to the top 5,000 population comparing the latest financial period and that which preceded it. This means that only around 7% of the top 5,000 population change auditors in any year.
