ABOUT NQF

NQF is an independent, nonprofit, 501(c)(3) Membership organization that brings together diverse organizations and individuals from across the country dedicated to improving health and healthcare through quality measurement. Over 300 organizations are Members of NQF, including hospitals, physicians and other clinicians, healthcare systems, patient and consumer non-profits, insurers, employers, and biopharmaceutical and life sciences companies.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Congress, and the Administration turn to NQF to take on complex and pressing healthcare measurement issues that impact tens of millions of Americans. NQF's open and transparent consensus development process ensures that everyone has an equal voice in working to get to measures that matter to consumers, their families, and providers. NQF Members contribute their time and expertise by serving on committees and workgroups and in leadership positions to prioritize, evaluate, and identify gaps related to quality measurement.
